Cutting edge healthcare in Edgbaston

Edgbaston Medical Quarter, just a mile from Birmingham city centre within the Calthorpe Estate, is integral to Birmingham's life sciences growth. It offers an unparalleled blend of existing medical buildings and healthcare development opportunities, coupled with strong collaboration, research and clustering, supported by a knowledgeable and well connected community, within a central location that is directly accessible from Europe, USA, UAE and the Far East.

Clustering

Edgbaston Medical Quarter (EMQ) brings together healthcare, academia and industry to support growth within over 25 life sciences specialist clusters. It is home to a proliferation of over 180 medical organisations, 80 hospitals and specialist care centres, 44 GP clinics and routine care facilities, and 23 training facilities.

Discover a growing regional cluster of medical and life sciences excellence with 36 centres of clinical and academic excellence and 25 life sciences specialities, within the heart of the United Kingdom.

Collaboration

EMQ promotes collaboration, working together alongside Medilink, West Midlands Academic Health Science Network and Business Birmingham, it can help investors find routes into the NHS, public and private sectors. The area is rapidly establishing itself as a collaborative community for healthcare and life sciences excellence at a regional, national and international level.

Academia & skills base

Birmingham is home to internationally renowned training and educational facilities including The University of Birmingham - the second largest medical school in the country - and Birmingham City University. The region provides access to high calibre graduates and a skilled workforce.

Specialist care

EMQ offers some of the best and most cutting edge places to be treated in the UK, providing faster access to treatments and helping to save lives. It has excellent medical facilities that rival London, many of the clinics are located in both cities, with specialist care centres including oncology, trauma, mental health, diabetes, addiction and eating disorders.

Excellent facilities

Within walking distance of one another, many of the facilities are at the cutting edge of world-class medical technology and involve leading practitioners and students from the UK's most important medical facilities, including the Queen Elizabeth Hospital Birmingham and University of Birmingham.
